WIGTON SUICIDE BOMBER FOILED

Terror came to the small Dumfries & Galloway village of Wigtown on Saturday when Scotland's second terror attack took place.

Terrified residents took cover when the world's first scooter suicide bomber attempted to blow up the local co op store and maim many innocent civilians. It was only the drunken reactions of a visitor to the town that saved the residents for the terror that has visited Glasgow Airport and many other parts of Britain.

On Saturday 4th of August at approximately 3pm the suicide bomber now identified as one Tariq Hussein attempted to drive his Vespa motor scooter at the store front of the Wigtown branch of the Co-op however one quick thinking drunken rockabilly foiled this attempt by using his own body as a shield for innocent bystanders.

Witnesses stated that the motor scooter was being driven erratically at speeds of over 30 mph.

Peter (ped) Burns was witness to the event and said "it wis pure mental man ah jist saw the scooter take aff like it wis some kind ah missile and then mad T-Bone jist jumps oot in front eh him and bang doon he goes a thought ah wis trippin but it wis pretty fuckin funny no".

Mr Peter (Ped) Burns

The hero of the hour T-Bone was heard to say "whit happened, who ur you where's ma drink" Dumfries and Galloway police released this statement "whit happened aw fir fuck sake how did naebuddy phone us nothing ever happens roond here

Other witnesses said that the scooter came out of nowhere at speed and headed straight for the Co-op window if it wasn't for that brave rockabilly we would all have been dead.

Further investigations revealed that the failed bomber was planning to target other targets using the vehicle below.

The suspect was seen limping from the scene of the incident saying that bastard got in ma way drunken fuck that he is.
